Day Trip

The West Michigan Pike was developed and constructed between 1911 and 1922 as one of the nation's first tourist roads, designed specifically to bring vacationers from Chicago to Michigan's West. A full-blown tourism industry with lodging, restaurants and attractions grew up along the West Michigan Pike and flourishes to this day.

This experience can't be summed up easily in a series of photos. Nor can it be captured, categorized or filed away under the entry of 'been there, done that.' A traveler should live it and celebrate the road, the people and the places along the West Michigan Pike!
